

News Break Scavenger Hunt

Sunday's News Break challenges you to hunt through the Sunday, October 8, 2017 print replica of The Seattle Times to find answers to the following questions.

1. With the number of buyers greatly outnumbering available homes, bidding wars are standard. The perception is home shoppers need to raise their budget by $_____ or more just to beat everyone else vying for the same homes, while sellers can kick back and watch how high over list price their home goes for. (MAIN)
2. KASUKABE, Japan — The cavernous underground cisterns in Kasukabe north of Tokyo could hold the Statue of Liberty, a scale that illustrates the site's immense task to do what?

Linked by tunnels that divert water away from the region's most vulnerable floodplains, the $2 billion underground anti-flood system, completed in 2006, is an extraordinary example of the defenses that global cities are installing as they face an era of extreme weather brought on by climate change.

3. The Silicon Valley startup Chowbotics has devised what it says is a partial solution. Its device, which it calls Sally the Salad Robot, is aimed at reducing the risk of food-borne illness by doing what? (MAIN)
4. Microsoft co-founder Paul Allen, concerned about illegal fishing depleting global fish populations, will spend $40 million to develop a system that uses satellite imagery and data-analysis software to help countries do what? (MAIN)
5. DaRelle Lamarque practices the art of contact staff at Volunteer Park in Seattle recently. "It's all about _____ and _____ and _____," says Lamarque, about how to keep the staff moving, often without the use of his hands. Lamarque, who served in the army and is starting his nursing-school prerequisite classes at Seattle Central College, said he enjoys the expressive nature of the art form. (NW SUNDAY)
6. Early in his career at WSU, Erik Powell would get passed over during obvious field-goal situations because Coach Mike Leach didn't trust the young kicker. Now, it's a different story. How many times did Leach put Powell in last night and how did he do? (SPORTS)
7. Amazon will have plenty of options when it picks the site for its second headquarters, and in an ironic twist for a company that helped introduce the world to online retail, a few of those options may be defunct shopping malls. Why? (BUSINESS)
8. If you're not particularly excited to see the temperature drop and rain set in, remember that the change in seasons also brings the chance to break out cozy _____ and fashionable _____. (SHOP NW)

9. The American economy might be humming along right now, but you should be prepared in case that changes. Job seekers hoping to insulate their careers from a downturn should opt for expanding industries and specialized tasks that can't be done by a robot or are less likely to be outsourced to another country. What are the top 5 industries that fit the bill? (JOBS)
10. Fujii, his wife and their two teenage daughters were sent first to Puyallup Assembly Center (the Washington State Fairgrounds) and later to Minidoka Relocation Center in Idaho. Fujii kept a precise visual diary of every stage of his internment camp experience, in both ink drawings and watercolors.

The last time Fujii's paintings were publicly displayed in Seattle was at the 1941 Northwest Annual, which closed in November. Soon after came the attack on Pearl Harbor, followed by President Franklin Roosevelt's Executive Order 9066. What did this order mandate? (NW ARTS & LIFE)
