

News Break Scavenger Hunt

Sunday's News Break challenges you to hunt through the Sunday, January 10, 2021 print replica of The Seattle Times to find answers to the following questions.

1. More than three weeks after the first vials of coronavirus vaccine arrived in Washington, the state has struggled to quickly vaccinate the most vulnerable people. Who are they? (MAIN)
2. As Earth's rotation speed slowed ever-so-slightly in recent decades, _____ were added intermittently to keep clocks up to date. If a new trend holds, time might need to be turned in the other direction soon. (MAIN)
3. Twitter's decision to ban President Donald Trump days before the end of his term sparked a fierce political backlash among his most fervent allies Saturday, sending some supporters — and the White House — scrambling to find another potent tool to _____ online. (MAIN)
4. Amazon is preparing to administer on-site coronavirus vaccinations to nearly _____ of its workers in Washington, according to a letter from the company to Gov. Jay Inslee in which the company urged the state to prioritize its workers for vaccination. (MAIN)
5. Amazon suspended the pro-Trump social network _____ from its web-hosting service this weekend, a move that threatens to darken the site indefinitely after its users glorified the recent riot at the U.S. Capitol. (MAIN)
6. A crow rips up grass at Riverview Playfield in West Seattle in search of larvae of the European chafer, an invasive _____ beetle. The grubs are "a great source of protein," noted Patti Bakker, with the city's Department of Parks and Recreation. (NW)
7. New market research shows that in the Seattle area, TV-streaming services provided the escapism we needed during the early days of the pandemic. What are the three most popular streaming services of 2020? (NW)
8. There's been a lot of interest in vitamin D for several years due to the possibility that deficiency increases the risk of developing osteoporosis, heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure and several other health conditions. But it's vitamin D's role in _____ health that's currently grabbing our attention, thanks to research suggesting that low vitamin D levels may increase COVID-19 risk. (THE MIX)
9. _____ continued to create into very old age; this photo, from a Cardin runway show at Moscow Fashion Week in 2016, shows his fondness for cosmic sparkle and his futuristic playfulness with shape. "I design for tomorrow," he said, late in his life. "I never look backward." (THE MIX)
10. Already an excellent winter activity in an ordinary year, knitting is even better suited to this season, when we're being encouraged to stay home and restrict our social circles. Picking up needles and yarn to create scarves, hats, mittens and sweaters is an inexpensive hobby and easy to take up, given the wealth of free online resources. But the craft can also trigger mental health benefits. Many studies show that knitting helps the body by doing what three things? (AT HOME IN THE NW)
